ecobuild shanghai 2006

ecobuild shanghai 2006 is an initiative from the sister-city partnership between Hamburg and Shanghai. As a key project for promoting innovative concepts for urban development and construction in Shanghai, ecobuild shanghai 2006 acts in line with the preparation of the Expo 2010 to foster a 'Better City, Better Life.' After the Mayors of Hamburg and Shanghai signed a memorandum on ecobuild shanghai in September 2004, both of the cities' construction authorities agreed on an implementation framework in February 2005. Several sites located in a number of districts of Shanghai have been selected to demonstrate energy efficient, environmentally friendly technologies and concepts.

The buildings are designed to save 75% of energy when compared to the average energy consumption in Shanghai. The fittings will meet the highest standards of technology and quality. Innovative systems for drinking water supply, rain water utilisation, energy recovery and renewable energy, will be integrated. After the completion of the buildings in November 2006, professionals, technicians, academics, politicians and the general public, will have the opportunity during the 4 weeks open doors exhibition to visit the model units, experience the ecological concepts and gather information on these technologies.

ecobuild shanghai 2006 aims at promoting ecological building in Shanghai, by raising awareness towards ecological building concepts and technologies, in order to pave the way for German products and services. The project offers a platform for German suppliers to create contacts and promote their building materials and technologies through the industry and institutional network. German companies are given the opportunity to promote their image together with the project and at the same time to present themselves as pioneers for ecological building in China.
